One Hundred Railroad Workmen Taken Prisoners.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 1. The United States Supreme Court to-day decided in favor of Boyd in the Nebraska case. All the Justices, except Justice Field, concurred in the conclusion of the Court that Boyd was a citizen of the United States and entitled to the office of Governor of Nebraska. Justice Harlan, however, wrote a dissenting opinion in which he said that Boyd was a citizen, because from a record in the case it must be considered as established, that Boyd's father, having exercised all rights of a citizen, in fact became a naturalized citizen, notwithstanding he did not have the record of such final naturalization papers. The Court also held there was such a thing as collective naturalization, that is, the naturalization of all inhabitants of Nebraska, at the time of its admission, except such as desired to retain their foreign rights, and that Boyd's exercise of various rights did not affect his status as a citizen. The Court reversed the decision of the Supreme Court of Nebraska and ordered it to take further proceedings in conformity with the decision that Boyd was a citizen. Opinion by Chief Justice Fuller.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1892.

New York Democratic Row.

Every day now tends to widen the breach between the factions of the Democratic party. The 100 men are in a majority in the New York Democratic State Committee; consequently the 100 programme for an early convention to select delegates went through with a rush. The Cleveland men protest that they will not submit to this "slimy judgment" and threaten to send a contesting delegation to Chicago. The row has been taken up by the party organs and a variety of opinions is expressed. The Bangor Advertiser, as is usual with that organ, expresses the whole question in a brief editorial, saying the "famous friends of Mr. Cleveland" tell them they have made a mistake, and the convention was called in a regular way, and warns them that they are doing their best to make Cleveland's nomination impossible, unless as an act of political suicide.

The New York World, however, which has all along been a zealous champion of Hill, does not look upon this incident with the indifference manifested by our Bangor contemporary. It sees danger ahead and places the blame at the door of Senator Hill. "The Democratic dissident faction with the policy of holding a freeze-out, mid-winter convention," it says, "is wide-spread and very strong." The rebels manifested in a purpose to send a contesting delegation in the opinion of the World "means disunion and division in the Democratic party, a State without whose electoral vote no Democratic candidate can be elected." As to the manner in which the committee reached its decision the World says:

"The committee that determined upon the uniting of the more than thirty anti-slavery delegates in support of Hill, without a single word of debate, without discussion or deliberation. It offered to the party not one single reason for its action, and the committee itself rejected a proffered joint purpose, and that purpose has been condemned as unjust, unwise and wrong by the unanimous voice of the Democratic press throughout the State and throughout the country."

A blunder has been made. Senator Hill can do little if any harm. It is his desire that he is a Democrat, and he has an opportunity such as never in few months to prove the sincerity of his devotion to Democracy."

It will now be interesting to note what action Hill will take under the circumstances. If he retreats he must do it before it is too late; if he persists in his course the chances are that New York will send a double delegation to the convention. The situation is a delicate one for our Democratic friends."

A Bold Game.

The Auburn Advertiser is a Democratic paper, but it is not in love with Hill's methods. It says: "As the instance of Senator Hill February 2 has been fixed as the date for the New York State Democratic convention. This action was taken, so Senator Hill's critics contend, to prevent a fair expression of New York Democratic opinion as regards the next Presidency. If that proves to be the fact the New York politician's precipitate will be likely to do his chances far more harm than good. He certainly seems to be playing a very bold game with his own party as well as with the Republicans."

Breckinridge's Hypocrisy.

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Press in describing the significant rebuke administered by the Democratic House to Breckinridge, of Kentucky, for voting against considering the resolution offering aid to the President, says: "A severe rebuke was given Mr. Breckinridge by Mr. Boutelle, of Maine, who spoke in upon the former's insinuations of what he might say he were to speak frankly, with the question: 'Why don't you speak truly if you speak at all?' The correspondent says:

"The force of the query struck the House, as pointed out more clearly by the sympathetic position of the man who had uttered the resolutions. It struck Mr. Breckinridge also. His face flushed, and he was evidently embarrassed by his resolution to secure retribution; that it was perfectly understandable covered no inferior motive. This explanation did not receive any credence from the most partial friends of the state."

On motion of Mr. Blount, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, by whom it was held in abeyance, thus a public declaration was made to Mr. Breckinridge, and his attempt to gain a little prestige failed with miserabilty.

Simply Killing Time.

The majority of the Democrats of the House of Representatives, so far as they were present in the caucus Saturday night, accepted the rules prepared for them by the Breckinridge-Hill syndicate. The code of rules reported by the three Democratic members of the Committee on Rules is to be adopted. These three members are to have control of the legislation of the House, according to the belief of three political managers who are not even members of the House. The young, genial men who have come to the front in the last few days in opposition to the vital principle of the proposed new rules will tomorrow hear the crack of the parrot whip and will be expected to remain silent on the back seat.

Meanwhile two months of the session have gone and the House is without rules, and has transacted no business. The only measures of importance that have been before that body were the ones to return the petitions distributing and printing bills documents, the resolution to provide for the transportation to the starved people of Russia of the generous offering of the people of this country and one to cut off of mess clerks. The printing bill, which was the result of several months' work of a joint committee of the House and Senate, was a carefully prepared measure which would have aided the country had a militia done annually was defeated, notwithstanding it came before the House with a unanimous report. The only substantial objection urged against it was that it would interfere with the privileges of the members.

The non-action of the House with regard to the suffering humanity in Russia is a stain upon the national honor. The resolution to cut off the unnecessary perks was killed because it would deprive the members of privilege. That is the record of the House, with more than two-thirds majority, for a period of two months. On Friday the Democrats were discussing what committee should have jurisdiction of the District of Columbia Appropriation bill. Yet, when the Republicans had control of the House two years ago, the District of Columbia Appropriation Bill was passed on Jan. 8, three weeks before the Democrats in this House reached the highest point of the committee which should have charge of it. The Administrative Customs' Bill, which, next to the McKinley Bill, was the most important measure passed by the last Congress, was sent to the Senate to Jan. 10.

Getting Light.

A Washington despatch to the Portland Press says: "After the abuse aimed at the 'Red rules' in the last Congress, it seems strange that the Democrats should do anything in them which they consider worthy to pander after. Yet the debate on the rules in the House during the last two days has brought prominent proof of the serious fact that Mr. Hill's plan to prevent filibustering and to enable a majority to do business and be responsible, rather than to allow an irresponsible minority to be in control, meets the cordial approval of the Democratic leaders. Mr. Bryan, of Indiana, one of the Democratic leaders of the present Congress, has proposed an amendment to the rules designed to correct this evil, and Bourke Cochran, of New York, made a strong speech warning the House of the necessity of adopting a rule which would make filibustering impossible. It actually seems as if the Democrats were at last coming to the Democrats are to this 'slimy judgment' and threaten to send a contesting delegation to Chicago. The row has been taken up by the party organs and a variety of opinions is expressed. The Bangor Advertiser, as is usual with that organ, expresses the whole question in a brief editorial, saying the 'famous friends of Mr. Cleveland' tell them they have made a mistake, and the convention was called in a regular way, and warns them that they are doing their best to make Cleveland's nomination impossible, unless as an act of political suicide."

WONDER-UL DISCOVERY.

BREWER LOCALS.

Mr F E Collier is ill at his home on Main Street, near Drye's Cov.

Capt. F G Arey has arrived home from a trip to Boston and other places.

Mrs M E Farrington left yesterday to resume her course at the State College in Orono.

Mr W H Jones, Superintendent of the pulp mill, is ill at his home at South Brewer.

The next assembly of the J O B was held on the coming Friday evening, at City Hall.

One small boy had so great a desire to skates yesterday that he tried it on the sidewalk. They were quite slippery and he made good progress on them.

A very pleasant meeting of the white club was held last evening with Miss Stella Weeks, at her home on Union street.

One small boy had so great a desire to skate yesterday that he tried it on the sidewalk. They were quite slippery and he made good progress on them.

The starting of the water supply Sunday evening, enabled the past masters, who had been shut down for a short time, to resume operations yesterday.

Mrs Emma Stanley, of South Brewer, has recovered from her recent illness, and has resumed her duties as teacher of the school at Snow's Corner, in Orrington.

Mr Charles H. DeLoach, who has been attending the High school in this city, is continuing his education at the State College in Orono, and left yesterday to begin his studies there.

Quite a number of people were skating on the cleared places on the river near South Brewer yesterday, but the ice was not in the best condition for it, being somewhat rough.

School Agent S H Hall, has purchased three cords of wood for use in the school-houses, and it is Hall's Center, from where the city team will soon begin to haul it to the buildings where it will be burned.

The trouble at Veazie, of which an account was given in yesterday's WIT, was remedied, as was expected, so that the water was turned on again early Sunday evening, and yesterday seemed to be running all right.

The force employed at the pulp mill at South Brewer, a mill owner has been acted. Mr A L Cole, of Lawrence, Mass., was engaged for the position, and has during the past few weeks filled it in a very satisfactory manner.

A typographical error made us say yesterday morning that the meeting of the Normal Club was to occur this Friday evening, would be held at the residence of Mrs Norman. It should have been that of Mr Norman in Hall, on State street.

A fine horse owned by Mr A S Curle, of South Brewer, got on a thin place in the ice on the river at the end of the city, Saturday while it stood there, and broke through. He was rescued from the water, however, and seemed practically none the worse for his cold bath.

The second entertainment in the literary contest was given at the meeting of the Pine Grove Grange last evening and consisted of original poems, essays, recitations and musical selections, and was very interesting and creditable to those who entered it. The next one occurs on the coming Monday evening.

A good portion of yesterday was spent weather, although at times the sky was overcast with clouds. It was too warm however for the making of ice, and the deities in that commodity were hoping that a colder temperature would soon follow. The sun melted to some extent during the day, and the lighting was growing poorer.

Yesterday the snow on the frozen surface of the river at F W Ayer & Co's manufacturing plant in South Brewer was scraped off, and yesterday a large number of men and horses were busily engaged in plowing a path in the field near the shore where the snow was quite deep. It is now about eight inches in thickness, excepting where the plowing was done, that portion being, of course, somewhat thinner.

A short time ago we recorded the fact that a Brewer man had some plains in a flourishing condition and that birds had appeared on them. Now he announces that one of the latter is about an hour's walk from the housekeeper's garden in Regent's Park. The intelligent Sally has been the subject of comment among men of science, sages and philosophers and possibly theologians. Perhaps the most remarkable of her feats was that of counting.

Sally, who is said to be a widow, was called upon by a number of men in her care who would give you the exact number you named up to ten and the keeper has found her when alone count in this way up to twenty. If one of the public asked for five, six or seven straws whatever quantity up to ten she would pick each deliberately up without any mistake put one by one in her mouth until all were got together and then gave them into your hand.

She is said to be a widow and we must be tired. We were inside and out. When we reached the house Gibson hurried in first and led us to see her doughnut hole. No need of saying that her father and mother were surprised to see her come up to the door and exhibit triumphantly four small wolf.

After the goblins exploit the pony was more perturbed than before. But he did not deserve it.—Kate M Putney in St Nicholas.

Every Inch a Spider.

A good story is told on one of the officers connected with a local militia company. For many days before the offering of the citizen soldier the officer in question would often affect to retire to the privacy of his own bed-chamber in the second story of his residence, and after dressing himself in full regalia would put on an imaginary company of soldiers through a lively course of drilling! He would clasp his sword at the belt with one hand and at the point with the other, and then walk backward as if viewing the alignment of his troops.

It so happened that while going through this maneuver one afternoon, he walked backward into an open stairway and tumbled into a heap on the floor of the room below, and presented anything but a soldierly and dignified appearance as he lay there rubbing his bruises. His good wife was in the room attending to some household duty, and when she came to the side of the fallen hero, and in anxious and tender voice asked him if he were hurt.

With a quick bound her husband regained his feet, and coming to an "attention" in a voice of thunder roared out. "Hurt? No, woman, what do you know about war?" and then ran back up stairs and dismissed his soldiers.—Anaconda (Mont) Standard.

One Man's Loss Another's Gain.

Whenever there is a fire you can be sure that it may bring loss to some one it brings gain to others," said J Harry Sutler of a big importing firm.

Many of our people will regret to learn of the death of Mrs Fazia Nickerson, of South Orange, which occurred at that place Sunday night. She was the mother of Mrs Josie A Hopkins of this city, to whom the sympathy of a wide circle of friends will be extended. Mrs Nickerson had passed the age of 60 years, 4 months and 22 days, and was a lady highly esteemed by all. The funeral is to be held Wednesday at 10 o'clock in the forenoon.

A DANGEROUS PRACTICE. Many of the small children at South Brewer are induling in a practice which is very liable to result in a serious accident if a stop is not put to it. In several places they coast down inclines in such a direction that before stopping they cross the track of the electric railroad, and in some cases do so at quite a speed. Now, on account of intervening buildings, it is not possible to see an approaching car at all the points on these slopes and a collision between a rapidly moving one and a sled is not only posible but likely to occur at any time.

This would, of course, result disastrously to the sled and whoever was using it, and to avoid such a catastrophe the children who have been in the habit of sledging in the places above referred should be warned to do no longer.
